

e2Value Releases Pronto Instant Insurance Valuator

Stamford, Conn., (September 29, 2008) – e2Value, Inc. announces the release of Pronto™, a new online replacement cost valuator that delivers instant insurance values. Users only need to enter the property address in order for Pronto to deliver a replacement cost that is based on public, RSMeans and e2Value data, and e2Value's patented Expert Valuation System™.

Pronto is the one-stop source for the insurance professional to obtain a complete property report that includes data scoring, images and an insurance valuation as well as risk mapping. It used to be that each of these pieces of information could only be found by researching them through multiple sources, a time-consuming process. By using Pronto, agents and brokers only need to provide the property address in order to establish a replacement value. This can be done right at their desks, saving them time and money.

Pronto is flexible and allows for the future use of the property valuation. All the information provided about a property is stored as part of the valuation and can be retrieved and updated at policy renewal. Pronto is capable of analyzing carriers' policies one at a time or all at once. This analysis can help carriers balance their Insurance-to-Value (ITV) along with understanding and building data that can be mined for greater knowledge about their entire book of business. The results of the data mining can be used for greater differentiation and rating delineation.

This is the latest replacement cost valuator for e2Value. Pronto joins a long list of valuation products for residential properties, including ones that can value main street homes; log and earth homes; high-value homes; manufactured, modular and kit homes; geodesic homes; condos and co-ops. e2Value also offers commercial and farm and ranch property valuations.
